

SHABBAT and STUDY WITH SH'LICHA NOAM WOLF – March 1-2, 2019

A sheli'ach, (or sh'lichah for women) is a person that Israel selects, trains, and sends abroad to serve as a cultural ambassador and informational emissary to the Jewish diaspora. Rabbi Edleson had the privilege of working with Noam Wolf in her congregation in New Hampshire, and is excited to be able to bring her here to Temple Sinai through cooperation with the Jewish Federation of New Hampshire. Noam is a skilled musician, Jazz singer, and has brought very interested approaches to conversations and teaching about Israel.

ISRAEL AT 2048—A POSTER SESSION & DISCUSSION—followed by Havdalah—4:00pm

Students at Israeli art schools were challenged to create posters imagining Israel in 2048, using the Balfour Declaration and Declaration of Independence as touchstones, but then making commentary on Israel's current strengths, challenges, and failures. The posters are VERY diverse and represent a wide range of views and criticisms that challenge the viewer. They provide a powerful jumping-off point for an honest discussion about our dream of Israel and how that relates to the reality of Israel today and in the future. Please come to this innovative, thought-provoking, and visually fascinating event.

Noam Wolf is a 27 year old entrepreneur and independent musician from Israel. She is currently serving as a community Sh'lichah (Israeli Emissary) for the Jewish Agency of Israel and the Jewish Federation of New Hampshire. Prior to coming on Shlichut, Noam served as an Educational Officer for the Israeli army, wrote and recorded her first album, worked in a startup company as VP sales, and later became a music business owner. Noam was born in Tel Aviv and grew up in a very "business oriented" environment to ambitious and achieving parents, and has two young brothers all back in Israel.

Noam studied for 2 years at Rimmon School of Jazz and later got her Diploma of Business Entrepreneurship at Yeshivat Zichron Moshe school. For the last two years, she had managed her own business for music production and for business events in Israel and around the world.
