

(full recording is missing, meeting chat below)

Notes from event:

Marcia Dalphin Williams. Polson/ Vermont.

Tip: check out the artist Biography - Leslie Van Stavern Millar II

Tiffany Spire. Billings:

1. Check your email signature to make sure the links work!
2. Pinterest for marketing your work as a writer/ illustrator. Pinterest is a search engine and people can find your work over time when you post a good photo, link to your website/ newsletter/ blog/ book, etc. Learned about this in the Women in Publishing Summit

Meagan Dallner. Billings:

1. Critique Circle- website where you can post your written work and have it critiqued by others. Can create “closed” circles with specific people. Separated by genre
2. Conferences are awesome. Meagan is going to be teaching a workshop about “How to Write a Synopsis” at the Colorado Gold Conference which is a writer’s conference for PB-Adult work. Virtual and in-person sessions.

Michelle Molloy. Missoula? Tip: “If you want to write for children ask ‘what’s the story of my heart? The story only I can tell, the story that might change a child’s life.” -quote from Joyce Pasquan (?) Macmillan Children’s Publishing

Jodi Hausen. Bozeman. Tip: The Authors Guild. Organization to help authors with legal/ copyright/ education. Webinars/ legal advice with membership. Website templates/ Boilerplate Contracts

Jeanne Bowman. Sidney. Tip: Create an “idea bank” a place where you can list all of your ideas and access them easily that you can refer back to on days when your brain feels like a dry sponge. Airtable is a free browser based spreadsheet to help organize ideas.
