PRESS RELEASE

Architectural Design Contract Awarded for Eastern Greenwich Civic Center

The First Selectman's committee for the EGCC is pleased to announce that the architectural contract for the replacement of the Civic Center has been awarded to TSKP Studio of Hartford, CT.

TSKP was selected by the Committee from a group of 5 finalists. TSKP designed the now complete New Lebanon School.

The Eastern Greenwich Civic Center was built in 1950 as a recreation center for the Electrolux Corporation. The Town of Greenwich acquired the building and land in 1966 and been using it as a Civic Center for the last 53 years.

The Co-Chairmen of the Committee, Scott Johnson and Gary Dell'Abate, described the process as receiving exciting presentations from each architectural finalist showing their potential "vision" for a new facility utilizing a similar footprint and incorporating various replacement goals, such as basketball courts and a gymnasium, multi-purpose event and recreational space, multi-purpose activity rooms, lounge, field access restrooms and Civic Center and OGRCC offices. This review process also confirmed the need for a new, not renovated, facility incorporating best available technologies that are consistent with community surveys and within realistic budgetary guidelines.

Newly elected First Selectman Fred Camillo remarks, "This is wonderful news for the Town of Greenwich. A new civic center will help meet the high demands for field usage and gym time and will be a chance for public-private partnerships to produce a facility that our residents can be proud of for generations to come.

After completion of a new property survey, the Committee will meet with TSKP to commence schematic designs and space plans. This is anticipated to occur early next year, with anticipated municipal improvement and land use applications to follow thereafter.
