

The Path

Introduction from Soul Matters Collective

When it comes to abundance, our culture and our religion are clearly at odds. Our culture cries, “Accumulate!” Our faith counsels, “Appreciate!” The mantras couldn’t be more different: The media tells us, “Get what you want!” The pulpits plea with us to “learn to want what you have.”

So, yes, appreciation is central to this month. Noticing the abundance around us is work we are called to do. But we wonder if that’s enough. It all depends on what we do after noticing.

Sometimes there’s a passivity to appreciation that leaves nothing changed. There’s a big difference between appreciating the blessing of family and committing to sitting down together for dinner three or four times a week. It’s one thing to notice the beauty that fills your own backyard; it’s another to pull yourself out of the rat race and make time to enjoy it. It helps to have a sermon remind us that our partners or parents are doing the best they can, but that insight rarely sticks without a commitment to let go of all the things we wish they were and instead embrace the limited but wonderful abundance of what they are.

In short, appreciation only gets us part of the way there. Noticing places abundance in view, but only new commitments put it within reach. Without a decision to change our lives, noticing becomes nothing more than nostalgia.

So, what needs to change? Maybe that’s the real question this month. What may need to be altered in your life so you can dance with what is plentiful rather than worrying about what is scarce? What clutter needs to be cleaned up so there is room for real abundance to enter in?

What changes will free you from the urgent and allow in the meaningful?

Yes, people of abundance make time for noticing, but they also make tough choices. Choices that, after they are made, don't really feel tough at all.

Spiritual abundance is waiting for us, friends. May this be the month we choose it.

Self-Care for the Spiritual Journey

When we go deeper into spiritual exploration together and individually, there's always a chance we will encounter some tender spots in our own spirits and stories. Therefore, it is important, when doing deep spiritual work, to have trusted companions and adequate support on the journey, and to know you are welcome to care for yourself and your spirit along the way, engaging in the theme to the level that's comfortable for you.

Likewise, please know that we are here to offer support if you find yourself struggling with something surfaced by the monthly theme. During Rev. Mara's sabbatical, Rev. Phyllis O'Connell is our first point of contact for pastoral care. She may be able to set up a time to meet you, or refer you to Andre Mol, our ministerial intern, caring lay leaders through our Care Network, or outside resources. She can be reached at phyllis@uusociety.org or (802) 862-5630 ext. 24.

Option A: Abundance on a Scale of 1-10

This exercise invites us not only to recognize the abundance in our lives, but also to recalibrate it. Sometimes abundance is a blessing; other times, too much of it is suffocating. Same with scarcity. Much of the time, scarcity feels like a desert, but other times it is the key to freedom. With this in mind, look over the list below and rate how abundant or scarce each is in your life, on a scale of 1 (scarce) to 10 (abundant). Then make time to reflect on the results. What surprised you? What insight came from placing all the rankings side by side? What may need recalibration?

1. Access to food
2. Freedom to make decisions about what you wear
3. Friends
4. Moments of beauty
5. Moments of micro-aggression
6. Freedom to make decisions about how you use your time
7. Exercise
8. Financial independence
9. Regret
10. A sense of purpose
11. Access to health care
12. Time to volunteer
13. Access to reliable shelter
14. Worry
15. Entertainment devices and activities
16. Novels read
17. Dinners where your loved ones sit and talk
18. Play
19. Passion
20. Respect of your peers
21. Envy
22. People to talk to when tough times come
23. Fond memories
24. Family obligations
25. Work/professional obligations
26. Time for meditation/prayer
27. Self care
28. Self love

Spiritual Exercises

Option B: Find It by Giving It Away

“A student went to his master and said, ‘I am very discouraged. What should I do?’

The Zen Master replied, ‘Encourage others.’” Nakagawa Roshi

“When we are feeling the poorest, that’s time to give a gift.” Dhyani Ywahoo

It’s a great spiritual truth: We find abundance when we give ours away. Jesus put this insight at the heart of his ministry: “You must lose your life to find it.” We lift it up every time we say, “To give is to receive.”

If you are struggling with a lack of personal abundance right now, turn this truth into your spiritual exercise this month. Don’t try to find encouragement; give it to others. Don’t tackle your problem head on; look for others with the same struggle and find a way to offer them help. If you are feeling “poor,” figure out a gift you can give. In short, address others’ needs for more abundance and see what you end up with in return.

Come to your group ready to share if the old formula worked.

Option C: The Abundance of Clutter

Abundance gets in the way of abundance. Sounds silly but it’s true. Too much stuff leaves us trapped. An over-packed schedule leaves us feeling empty. Clutter - material or spiritual - acts like a cage, leaving us little room to move, or breathe.

There’s no better month than November to take on this clutter in our lives. Fall trees shed their leaves, inviting us to do some of the same. The holidays are right around the corner, with their yearly attempt to get us to pack even more into our lives.

So find a few ways this fall to “declutter.” Of course, you will first need to figure out what that means to you. Often it is material clutter we need to tackle. Just as often it is spiritual clutter that needs to be addressed. Truth is, most of the time, it’s hard to separate the two. Whatever you decide to focus on, choose at least one strategy to address it. And remember that not all clutter is junk. Our work is not simply to throw the clutter out, but to sort through it. Almost always, there are gems buried in the mess.

Here’s some inspiration and guidance to help you along the way:

Option D: A Week of Abundant Poetry

This month, take a week and weave abundance into your daily meditation practice. There are a number of moving and challenging poems in our Resources section. As your spiritual exercise this month, use five of them to create a week's worth of meditations on abundance. Consider the practice of reading through the poem two to three times, choosing a different focus question for each reading. For instance, when reading through it the first time, simply ask yourself, "What line or phrase pops out for me?" On your second reading, ask yourself, "Who or what am I in the poem?" Other focus questions might be: "What is the poem asking me to do today?" or "Who is the poem asking me to engage in a new way?" Pause after each reading to reflect. Carry the experience with you into your day. Come to your group ready to share how your week's worth of poetry and meditation altered your days.

Here's the list of poems we recommend, but of course alter as needed:

FRIDAY

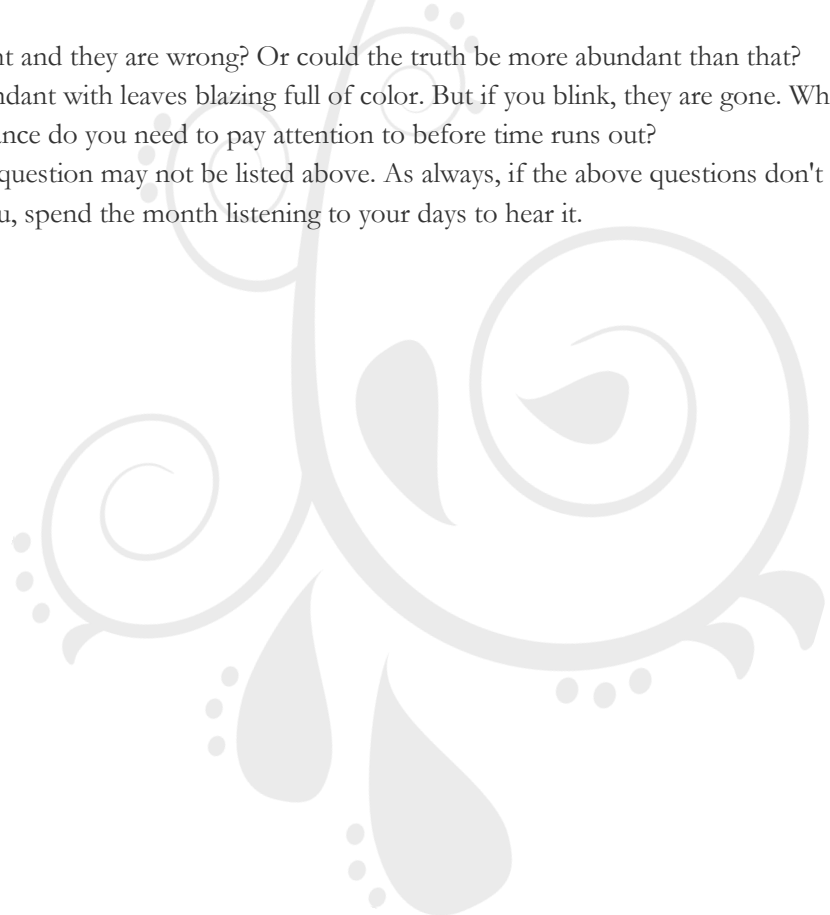

An Abundant Spirit by Edward Frost

I love those who are angry with me
Because they care deeply about something
They feel I may have hurt.
I love those who criticize me
Because they need something they think I can give.
I love 'wifty' people
Because their minds are usually in a nicer place
Than where we think we really are.
I love shy people
Because they are more like me, really,
Than the blustery and self-assured
Whom I love because I know how they really feel.
I love the know-it-alls
Because they know they don't know what is really important.
I love those who talk too much
Because I know how much they fear the silence.
And I love the quiet ones
Because they are usually listening.
I love those who love me - - in spite of what they know.

As always, don't treat these questions like "homework" or a list that needs to be covered in its entirety. Instead, simply pick the single question that speaks to you most and let it lead you where you need to go. The goal is to figure out what being a part of a people of abundance means for you and your daily living. So, which question is calling to you? Which one contains "your work"?

1. What would happen if you decided that abundance was lying around waiting for you to notice it, rather than something you earn or win?
2. What might it mean to allow yourself to be healed by the abundance all around you?
3. Do you love that which is plentiful or that which is scarce?
4. Is clinging to the pursuit of what you want cutting you off from noticing what you have?
5. So life's led you into a puddle. Are you still staring at your mud-covered feet? Or are you ready to look up and notice that the wide open sky never went away?
6. Are you a swamp or a stream? Do you collect and hoard abundance or let it flow through you?
7. Have you had enough of not feeling like you are enough?
8. Does time no longer feel abundant? Is that being forced on you? Or might you have a choice?
9. Are the best things in life really free? If so, how many will you pick up or lean into today?
10. Are you jealous of others' abundance? Have you ever considered the possibility that those very same folks are jealous of yours?
11. Who validates the abundance of who you are? Who has helped you present your whole self to the world? Have you thanked them lately?
12. Is it really true that you are right and they are wrong? Or could the truth be more abundant than that?
13. For many of us autumn is abundant with leaves blazing full of color. But if you blink, they are gone. What temporary blaze of abundance do you need to pay attention to before time runs out?
14. What's your question? Your question may not be listed above. As always, if the above questions don't include what life is asking from you, spend the month listening to your days to hear it.

The below recommended resources are not “required reading.” We will not analyze these pieces at our small group meeting. Instead they are here to companion you on your personal journey this month, get your thinking started, and open you to new ways of thinking about what it means to be part of a people of ABUNDANCE.

Word Roots

In Latin, unda means “wave,” or poetically, “sea.” The Romans combined ab, “from,” and unda into the word abundare, “to overflow”; literally, “to come from the waves” or “from the sea”; applied to anything very plentiful. Inundate, “to flood,” also comes from unda, as does undulate, “to move like the waves.” An interesting side-note: in ancient Egyptian ab means “heart.”

Wise Words

“Do I contradict myself? Very well, then I contradict myself, I am large, I contain multitudes.”

Walt Whitman

“It’s not what we have that constitutes our abundance, but what we appreciate.”

Jules Petit-Senn

“When we see that our days are replete with abundance, we are less afraid. When we are less afraid, we connect more. The more connections we see in our lives, the more abundance we notice.”

Rev. Deanna Vandiver

“I have the world’s largest collection of sea shells. I keep it scattered on the beaches of the world. Have you seen it?”

Steven Wright, comedian

“This could be our revolution: to love what is plentiful as much as what is scarce.”

Alice Walker

“The soul does not grow by addition but by subtraction.”

Meister Eckhart

“If you let go a little, you will have a little peace. If you let go a lot, you will have a lot of peace.”

Ajahn Chah

“Abundance is a process of letting go; that which is empty can receive.”

Bryant H. McGill

“The Buddhist word for attachment is ‘do shag’ which literally translates to mean ‘sticky desire.’ I love this translation! If you really think about how you feel when you are grasping for something that you really want, you can feel its sticky pull. And until you figure out a way to get it, you feel this longing and obsession. We have all been there with different things and at different times in our lives. In a world that entices us with constant cravings and sticky desires, we can slow ourselves down and let go of attachment to that desire for more. And surprisingly, without fail, if we let go, we will receive...”

Rev. Karon Sandberg

“The feeling of peace is something that happens in the present moment. It’s not something that we bring with us from the past or project into the future.”

Jill Bolte Taylor, My Stroke of Insight

“It takes three things to attain a sense of significant being: God, A Soul, and a Moment. And the three are always here.”

Rabbi Abraham Joshua Heschel

“Out of abundance, they took abundance, and still abundance remained.”

Upanishads

“My barn having burned down I can now see the moon.”

Mizuta Masahide

“Abundance is not about having what you want, but about noticing what you have, and multiplying it through sharing it, multiplying it through your manner of being in this world.”

Rev. Angela Herrera

“Be a stream, not a swamp. Remember, it is the mountain stream that carries fresh, life-giving water because it flows out. However, the swamp is stagnant. A swamp collects and retains water that comes its way. Don’t be the kind of person who seeks to accumulate much before allowing a little to flow through.”

Victor M. Parachin

“Our task is to learn who planted this orchard that we are now sitting in and to lift up their names. Our task is to name the names and celebrate the fact that... we are standing on the shoulders of many giants. As the season of harvest as it comes upon us - it is a time to celebrate the lasting gifts and the many fruits of unseen hands.”

Rev. Daniel Gregoire

“For me, the opposite of scarcity is not abundance. It's enough. I'm enough. My kids are enough. You're enough.”

Brené Brown

“We are beset with the fear of scarcity – not just economic scarcity, but fear that all our resources are limited... We grow up thinking that we are not good enough or wise enough or athletic enough or rich enough... enough to do what? To live up to the expectations others thrust upon us. We should decide for ourselves when enough is enough – but too often we let the pressures of the world decide this for us, and we find ourselves lacking.”

Rev. Anne Mason

“Those who know my mantra sometimes test me with it. ‘So, Forrest, do you really want cancer?’ ‘I want what I have,’ I reply. ...Each day that I am sick, I pray for the sun to come up, for people to love me, for manageable tasks that I can still accomplish, for a little extra courage, for reality to blow all the detritus off my plate. In short, I back away from the be-darkened pane of my health to gain a prospect of the whole window I am blessed to look through. The light then dances again in my daughter, Nina’s, eyes. I laugh once more at my little foibles. My son, Frank, and I celebrate the Mets’ acquisition of an all-star pitcher. I call my dear friends, Jack Watson or Peter Fenn, on the phone and talk for an hour about everything under the sun. Yes, I kvetch at unseemly waits at the chemo center (until I realize how many other folks have cancer and are waiting in line for their treatments also). I fall into a sour humor when my body wears down and cannot do what I want it to (until I shift gears and tackle something that lies well within my powers, like a moderately difficult sudoku or one of Robin Hobb’s splendid fantasy novels, where almost every character is doing worse than I am). I even snap at my wife, Carolyn, when she tries too hard to fatten me up for the kill. But that, too, eventually is good for a laugh. So I do want what I have, even as I do what I can...”

quiet in heart, and in eye clear. What we need is here.”

Abundance Without Attachment

“Call it the Christmas Conundrum. We are supposed to revel in gift-giving and generosity, yet the season’s lavishness and commercialization leave many people cold. The underlying contradiction runs throughout modern life. On one hand, we naturally seek and rejoice in prosperity. On the other hand, success in this endeavor is often marred by a materialism we find repellent and alienating... So here is my central claim: The frustration and emptiness so many people feel at this time of year is not an objection to the abundance per se... It is a healthy hunger for nonattachment...”

Over two decades ago, beloved and respected rabbi Zalman Schachter-Shalomi felt an uneasiness. He was growing older, and fears about death and infirmity were haunting him. So he decided to embark on a mission to get to the bottom of his fears. Through a series of events that included a vision quest in a secluded cabin and studying with Sufi masters, Buddhist teachers and Native American shamans, Reb Zalman found a way to turn aging into the most meaningful and joyous time in his life.
