"Ethics in ID/DD and Behavioral Health Services"

This highly interactive case-based discussion will review critical ethical issues that arise when considering individual autonomy, the risk of harm to self and others, conflicts among providers, individuals served, their families, and the ethics of service planning. During this three-hour training, participants will learn important skills in identifying, analyzing, and resolving relevant clinical ethics issues. We will consider a variety of concerns that develop when attempting to balance the desires and needs of individuals served, the professional responsibilities of providers, and the interests of the broader community.

Dr. Gillette, founder of Bioethical Services of Virginia, has provided training, case consultation and policy development for the past 25 years, locally, at the state level, nationally and internationally. His focus is on practical ethics-real talk, real people. He has a B.A. from Brandeis University and a doctorate in philosophy from Brown University.

This is a virtual training event via WebEx. An additional email will be sent with access information. Dr. Gillette will provide a certificate for contact hours if requested. Interested individuals who did not receive this "Save the Date" announcement should contact Nikki.carlyle@dhhs.nc.gov to be placed on the email list.
