June 14 – 16, 2022: Person-Centered Thinking (optional) (Virtual via Zoom)

July 12 – 14, 2022: Motivational Interviewing (optional) (Live in Cary)

August 1 – 5, 2022: Person-Centered Collaborative Communication (Live in Cary)

The NC Community Transitions Institute is a hands-on, collaborative learning opportunity for professionals who support individuals with long-term care needs to transition from facility settings to their homes and communities. The program is designed to bring together diverse stakeholders who support transitioning individuals and to develop best practices throughout the lifecycle of a transition. This Institute builds off existing person-centered thinking and motivational interviewing principles. However, the Institute furthers these principles and provides practical strategies for applying the principles in a transition context.

This Institute builds off existing person-centered thinking and motivational interviewing principles. However, the Institute furthers these principles and provides practical strategies for applying the principles in a transition context. Practices incorporated in the Institute will comport with those person-centered practices outlined in CMS' Home and Community-Based Services Final Rule. The goals of the Institute include:

1. Providing quality content that is immediately relevant to the practice of supporting a transitioning individual.
2. Strengthening Institute members' knowledge of, and utilization of, person-centered practices using collaborative communication techniques inspired by motivational interviewing in transition specific contexts.
3. Fostering professional collaboration and networking among Institute members.
4. Delivering a learning opportunity that enhances organizational capability to support person-centered transition practices.
5. Developing leadership competencies to sustain quality transition practices.
6. Generating clear recommendations for developing and advancing a Transition Policy Agenda
