Voices of Change: Law's Transformative Power

Dean Franita Tolson

From civil rights to climate policy, the law is more than just rules — it's a powerful tool that shapes our communities, defines justice, and influences whose voices are heard. USC Gould School of Law Dean Franita Tolson will briefly explore how legal decisions, grassroots movements, and landmark legislation have changed the course of history — and how today's students can use the law to drive meaningful change. Whether you're thinking about law school or simply curious about how systems work, this conversation will offer a compelling look at the real-world impact of legal ideas in action.
