Beauty in Nature and Form

Elizabeth Huntington Coley Fox (1895-1973) was an artist, school teacher and resident of New Rochelle from 1928 to 1947. As a life member of the Art Students League of New York and the New Rochelle Art Association, she created oil paintings and watercolors infused with a love of the natural world and guided by an intense but expressive spirituality. Fox was also a devoted patron of the library, which exhibited her artwork in the 1950s and 1960s.

Susan Elizabeth Fox Mitrano is an art teacher and artist working in watercolor and a variety of media. She currently creates Shibori textiles and nature-inspired linocut prints. Her hand-dyed scarves and home goods are made with both traditional Shibori techniques and original designs.

Sarah Elizabeth Mitrano is an artist and digital product designer living in Boulder, Colorado. After focusing on drawing and painting in her early years, Sarah earned a degree in communication design. She enjoys working with type, visual systems and information architecture to create beautiful and useful websites.
