

Mystery lovers can visit France with Cara Black's Aimee Leduc series, set in Paris, Martin Walker's charming Chief of Police Bruno series, set in France's Perigord region, or Jean-Luc Bannalec's series set in Brittany.

History lovers might want to try one of the many titles set against Paris' dramatic WWII history: Alan Furst's Mission To Paris, Charles Belfour's The Paris Architect, Natasha Lester's The Paris Seamstress and Janet Skeslien Charles' The Paris Library. An interesting news item from 2010, when a Paris apartment abandoned for decades was opened and revealed to be a time capsule, inspired several writers; take a look at Michelle Gable's A Paris Apartment, Kelly Bowen's The Paris Apartment, and Elizabeth Thompson's Lost In Paris for differing takes on this theme.

Juliet Blackwell's novels will take the reader on a tour of France, moving from The Paris Key to The Vineyards of Champagne, The Lost Carousel of Provence, and Off the Wild Coast of Brittany. And finally, romance lovers won't want to miss Nina George's Little Paris Bookshop and Nicholas Barreau's Paris Is Always a Good Idea.