

The Thrilling 34

Only 34 funds passed all my tests.

12-30-2019 | by Russel Kinnel

Every year I write about the Thrilling 34--although the number varies slightly each time. The idea is to focus on the most important factors and let them do the weeding for me. The goal is a short list of outstanding funds accessible to individual investors. This isn't a list for huge pension funds.

You can be awfully picky when you have 8,000 funds to choose from. The criteria have largely been the same, with some minor tweaks over the years.

Here are the tests I used this time:

1. Expense ratio in the category's cheapest quintile.
2. Manager investment of more than $1 million in the fund.
3. Morningstar Risk rating below the High level.
4. Morningstar Analyst Rating of Bronze or higher.
5. Parent rating better than average/neutral.
6. Returns above the fund's benchmark over the manager's tenure for a minimum of five years. In the case of allocation funds, I also used category averages because benchmarks are often pure equity or bond and therefore not a good test.
7. Must be a share class accessible to individual investors with a minimum investment no greater than $50,000.
8. No funds of funds.

The only real change to the above list is that I used prospectus adjusted operating expense ratio. I didn't make the switch just because it's a catchy name. It's the measure we use for our analyst ratings, too. It includes rolled up fund-of-funds fees but does not include transactional costs such as leverage or shorting. This avoids an apples-to-oranges comparison.

A more subtle change is that we have moved to the enhanced analyst ratings methodology, which rates funds on a share class level and has resulted in some rating changes. In particular, the ratings adaptation has led to downgrades in low-return categories such as short-term bond and munis, because our methodology is particularly unforgiving of middling fees in low-return categories.

However, because I already set the bar at cheapest quintile, it isn't likely to knock many of this list's candidates out of the box.

You may recall that I detailed past performance of prior lists earlier in the year here. In all six lists over the years, at least two thirds or more of the funds outperformed peers. And in five out of six lists, a majority outperformed their benchmarks. Of course, there are no guarantees that this list will match the prior lists' performance.

In the case of funds where multiple share classes qualified, I chose the one with the lowest minimum. For example, Vanguard's Admiral shares and Investor shares qualified for the nine funds that made the list, but because the investor share class also qualified, I used the investor share class.

I often get questions about this list that imply I should have chosen fund B over fund A. To be clear, it's a series of screens. I'm not picking the funds and there is no set number of funds. Over the years it has bounced from the 20s to the 40s.

My last note is that I included funds closed to new investors because their shareholders want to know if they still pass the test.

Here then are the Thrilling 34 in reverse alpha order.

Vanguard

Vanguard got nine funds on the list, the most of any firm. As Vanguardians like to say, it's not active versus passive, it's low cost versus high cost. The list of nine features active funds with fees as low as 21 basis points. When a fund is that cheap, it's a lot easier to deliver good performance and beat the benchmark.

Vanguard Wellington (VWELX) leads the way at just 0.25% for a classic balanced fund run by a strong team at Wellington. It's so easy to own that I recommend it just about as much as any other fund. And, no, it isn't closed--you just have to invest directly with Vanguard to get in.

Vanguard Wellesley Income (VWINX) is closely related to Wellington. It just has more bonds and more income, though less return potential.

Speaking of funds I recommend the heck out of, Vanguard Primecap (VPMCX) and Vanguard Primecap Core (VPCCX) are two of the best growth funds I know of. They are both closed, but their slightly pricier cousins Primecap Odyssey Stock (POSKX) and Primecap Odyssey Growth (POGRX) are both open to new investors. Senior analyst Alec Lucas just recorded a video discussing Primecap that you can watch here.

Vanguard GNMA (VFIJX) delivers straightforward GNMA exposure for 0.21% if you invest $3,000 and 0.11% if you invest $50,000.

Vanguard Explorer (VEXPX) delivers very boring small growth exposure for 0.46% and a $3,000 investment.

Vanguard Equity-Income (VEIPX) is a standout in the equity-income world with excellent management and a solid yield.

Vanguard Dividend Growth (VDIGX) has a great but simple strategy. It aims to find companies that are likely to raise their dividends over time. That's very basic, but companies that are likely to raise their dividends have to have healthy balance sheets and good growth prospects, too, and that makes for a fund with good defensive characteristics in recessions.

T. Rowe Price

I'm a big fan of T. Rowe Price, but many of its funds are just outside the cheapest quintile and so only three qualify. Still, they are among the best.

T. Rowe Price New Asia (PRASX) is a new entrant to the list because manager Anh Lu passed the five-year tenure mark a few months ago. We like Lu and the team of analysts supporting this fund. Its growth-oriented strategy looks like many other T. Rowe funds' emphasis on earnings growth and barriers to entry.

T. Rowe Price Mid-Cap Value (TRMCX) is a disciplined value fund that has delivered great results over David Wallach's 19 years. However, disciplined value has been a tough place to be as the fund's weak three-year results indicate. But I see plenty of reasons to hold on at this closed fund.

T. Rowe Price Mid-Cap Growth (RPMGX) has been in clover in this growth rally. Brian Burghuis has found winners upon winners at this closed fund.

Seafarer Overseas Growth and Income (SIGIX) has a $25,000 minimum for this share class, so don't let the institutional tag throw you. Andrew Foster has done a fine job here and at previous funds he ran for Matthews. The fund did have a setback in the recent departure of comanager InBok Song.

Harbor Capital Appreciation (HACAX) is likewise an accessible institutional-labeled fund. Here the Jennison team makes the most from large growth rallies like the one we've just experienced.

Fidelity

Fidelity got four funds on the list this time. Like T. Rowe, many of its active funds fall just short on fees.

Fidelity Total Bond (FTBFX) is a great bond fund that mixes aggression and caution. Ford O'Neil has the flexibility to position this fund more or less aggressively on credit risk. But it also boasts the strong issue selection we've come to expect from Fidelity's bond funds.

Fidelity Select Health Care's (FSPHX) Morningstar Analyst Rating was recently upgraded to Gold. We're fans of the deep team supporting this fund and it's nice to get it at a reasonable fee.

Fidelity Low-Priced Stock (FLPSX) is the same brilliant fund it's always been under Joel Tillinghast.

Fidelity Diversified International (FDIVX) has been a nice steady performer since Bill Bower took over in 2001. He looks for quality growth names and that has made the fund into a mild-mannered winner.

Dodge & Cox

Dodge & Cox is another firm that was made for this list. (American and Vanguard are the others.) Dodge has long-tenured managers, low fees, and nearly all of its managers invest more than $1 million of their own money in their funds. So, on a fundamental basis you have funds that are quite consistent year over year, even if their returns can be buffeted when value hits a rough patch.

Dodge & Cox Stock (DODGX), Dodge & Cox Income (DODIX), and Dodge & Cox Global Stock (DODWX) are well-known standouts with teams of great managers.

Dodge & Cox Global Bond (DODLX) is the new kid on the block. Its rating was recently upgraded to Silver as we've become more comfortable that it could successfully apply its approach from the Income fund to global bonds and currencies. Launched five and a half years ago, the fund has produced excellent results but still has less than $1 billion in assets.

Baird

Baird's institutional funds carry a $25,000 minimum, thus making my hurdle. The Milwaukee-based team has grown on us, leading us to upgrade the trio of bond funds to Gold. Baird Aggregate Bond (BAGIX), Baird Short-Term Bond (BSBIX), and Baird Core Plus Bond (BCOIX) lean toward the cautious side of their peer groups yet still produce solid returns. The Core Plus fund is obviously the most aggressive of the three but it still has good risk-awareness to keep it from going too far out on a limb.

Baird MidCap (BMDIX), the lone equity entrant from Baird, is a solid pick, too. However, as the Bronze rating indicates, we don't have it at the same level as the firm's bond funds.

American Funds

Capital Group's long-term focus dovetails nicely with the long-term focus of this screening exercise. Managers and analysts tend to make a career of their time at the firm. You can see that in the sober way the funds are managed, the long tenures, and the sizable investment managers make in their own funds. Costs are reasonable, too. (You can get American funds for no-load in most NTF supermarkets.)

American Funds New Perspective (ANWPX) illustrates how widely the firm's analyst and manager staff reaches. They've long had offices around the globe and brought excellent fundamental research to markets near and far. Not many firms have the depth to run a great world-stock fund, but they do.

American Funds Income Fund of America (AMECX) highlights another strength: dividend investing. The firm has a variety of dividend-oriented funds that produce solid income without sacrificing returns or taking bad risks. That focus does mean the fund has faced recent headwinds due to its tilt toward value and overweighting in foreign equities. But at some point, the market will rotate in its favor.

Bronze-rated American Funds Growth Fund of America (AGTHX) is quite diversified due to its large asset base. It spreads assets out among more managers than it typically does and that means a rather diffuse portfolio. So, this is not a thrilling growth fund but one with good fundamentals nonetheless.

American Funds Global Balanced (GBLAX) is a relative newcomer launched eight years ago. The fund targets a 60/40 stock to bond allocation. Many of its peers make top-down calls, but this one focuses on issue selection, which makes sense for American.

American Funds Capital World Growth & Income (CWGIX) takes Capital's dividend skills on the global stage and the result is a fine core holding.

American Funds American Balanced (ABALX) is a massive $157 billion fund with six equity managers and one balanced manager making allocation decisions. The main attraction remains stock selection and defensive characteristics combined with low fees.

American Funds AMCAP (AMCPX) seeks out capital appreciation and it has done a fine job of it. That mandate is broader than large growth and that's held it back somewhat in this growth-driven rally. But there's no reason it should depress returns for the next 10 years. Over longest-tenured manager Claudia Huntington's 23 years, returns have been excellent.

Glossary

Morningstar Analyst Rating™ for Funds

The Morningstar Analyst Rating™ is not a credit or risk rating. It is a subjective evaluation performed by Morningstar's manager research group, which consists of various Morningstar, Inc. subsidiaries ("Manager Research Group"). In the United States, that subsidiary is Morningstar Research Services LLC, which is registered with and governed by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission. The Manager Research Group evaluates funds based on five key pillars, which are process, performance, people, parent, and price. The Manager Research Group uses this five pillar evaluation to determine how they believe funds are likely to perform relative to a benchmark, or in the case of exchange-traded funds and index mutual funds, a relevant peer group, over the long term on a risk-adjusted basis. They consider quantitative and qualitative factors in their research, and the weight of each pillar may vary. The Analyst Rating scale is Gold, Silver, Bronze, Neutral, and Negative. A Morningstar Analyst Rating of Gold, Silver, or Bronze reflects the Manager Research Group's conviction in a fund's prospects for outperformance. Analyst Ratings ultimately reflect the Manager Research Group's overall assessment, are overseen by an Analyst Rating Committee, and are continuously monitored and reevaluated at least every 14 months. For more detailed information about Morningstar's Analyst Rating, including its methodology, please go to global.morningstar.com/managerdisclosures/.

The Morningstar Analyst Rating (i) should not be used as the sole basis in evaluating a fund, (ii) involves unknown risks and uncertainties which may cause Analyst expectations not to occur or to differ significantly from what they expected, and (iii) should not be considered an offer or solicitation to buy or sell the fund.

Morningstar FundInvestor

In this analysis, Morningstar evaluates funds based on a set of screens established by Russel Kinnel, Director of Manager Research and editor. As listed on p. 1 of the article, the screens applied are as follows: (1) Expenses must be in the cheapest quintile of the category; (2) manager investment in the fund must be more than $1,000,000; (3) the Morningstar Risk rating must be below the High level; (4) the fund must be a "medalist"—i.e., it must be rated Bronze, Silver or Gold; (5) Parent Rating must be positive; (6) the fund must have outperformed its prospectus benchmark over the tenure of the longest tenured manager. A minimum of five years is required; (7) category benchmarks or averages used for allocation categories; (8) no institutional share classes; (9) no fund of funds. The test was run using returns through July 2018. Using these ten screens, the tool filtered 28 out of more than 8,000 mutual funds.

Morningstar Manager Return

A fund's annualized return from the start date (the first day of the month shown) of the longest tenured manager.

Morningstar Parent Rating

An assessment of the parent organization. Key (operational) areas of evaluating a parent organization include: recruitment and retention of talent, organizational structure, capacity management, organizational and business strategy, alignment of interests with fund investors and regulatory compliance.

Morningstar Risk

An assessment of the variations in a fund's monthly returns, with an emphasis on downward variation. It is calculated as the difference between Morningstar Return (adjusted for loads and excess over the risk-free rate) and Morningstar Risk-Adjusted Return (adjusted for loads, excess over the risk-free rate and risk). Morningstar Risk is similar to (and correlated with) standard deviation; the key difference is that standard deviation gives the same weight to upside and downside variation. Morningstar Risk is measured for up to three periods (three, five and 10 years).

For each period, all funds in a category are ranked by Morningstar Risk. The top 10% are given a risk score of 5, or "High"; the next 22.5% are scored 4, or "Above Average"; the next 35% are scored 3, or "Average"; the next 22.5% are scored 2, or "Below Average"; the bottom 10% are scored 1, or "Low."

Investments are not FDIC-insured, nor are they deposits of or guaranteed by a bank or any other entity, so they may lose value.

Investment results assume all distributions are reinvested and reflect applicable fees and expenses. Returns greater than one year were annualized. Expense ratios are as of each fund's prospectus available at the time of publication. When applicable, investment results reflect fee waivers and/or expense reimbursements, without which results would have been lower. Please see capitalgroup.com for more information.

Investing outside the United States involves risks such as currency fluctuations, periods of illiquidity and price volatility, as more fully described in the prospectus. These risks may be heightened in connection with investments in developing countries. The return of principal for bond funds and for funds with significant underlying bond holdings is not guaranteed. Fund shares are subject to the same interest rate, inflation and credit risks associated with the underlying bond holdings. Lower rated bonds are subject to greater fluctuations in value and risk of loss of income and principal than higher rated bonds.
