

Sylvia's spiritual journey began when she was a child in her grandparent's small Pentecostal church. She loved going to church, singing in the choir, and attending Sunday School. At the age of 8 she gave her life to the Lord and never looked back. She joined Campus Ministry at Savannah State University, where she learned the meaning of true fellowship and discipleship. She was then introduced to Theology and Apologetics. With that knowledge she went home the next year and started a Young Adult Ministry at her home church in South Carolina. She graduated with her bachelor's degree and decided to obtain her Master's in Theology, which she received in 2016.

God placed chaplaincy on Sylvia's heart. She went back to school to finish her Master of Divinity. In 2017 she got a job with the Veteran's Benefits Administration and moved to Phoenix, AZ. God continued to put chaplaincy on her heart, and she began researching how military chaplaincy could be used to reach the young adults in the military. Sylvia spoke to a recruiter and began the process of becoming an Army chaplain.

Sylvia married her husband, Matthew, in 2015. She enjoys working out at the gym, studying Apologetics, hiking, and traveling.

Why the U.S. Army Chaplaincy?

In 2017, Sylvia began working for the Veterans Benefits Administration. She worked claims for veterans seeking disability compensation from injuries they incurred in service; and daily she would see the dire need for chaplains, especially women chaplains, in the military. In 2018, Sylvia was chosen to work on a special team to handle Military Sexual Trauma claims and have been shocked at the number of claims, from both men and women, stating they were unable to report issues of depression, anxiety, or sexual assault to their chaplains because they were uncomfortable or too embarrassed to speak to their male chaplains.

When Sylvia's veteran colleagues found out she was obtaining her degree in Divinity, they insisted she become an Army chaplain. They all asserted that with her personality and love for people, she would be perfect for the job. At first, she was against the idea. She figured she could become a VA Chaplain instead, but after seeing the great need for military chaplains in her work she began to open her heart up to the possibility.

In June 2019, while she was in meditation and prayer, Sylvia heard the call of God to become an Army chaplain. She began to research the qualifications and give much thought into how she measured up to them. She considered her physical attributes, her religious convictions, and mental preparedness. She has spent much time in prayer and was sure that she was ready to answer the call to serve soldiers in the Army through chaplaincy.

God has given Sylvia unique gifts that would be beneficial for Army chaplaincy, such as the spiritual gifts of mercy, knowledge, teaching, and wisdom. She is also an excellent team player and do not mind working in a pluralistic setting. Sylvia keeps herself in great shape physically, mentally, and emotionally and she always put the needs of others before her own. She believes she can handle the rigorous life of being a soldier all while providing comfort and smiles to the soldiers who need it.
