

Types of Classes this Fall

Online

Online classes are completed remotely. They will not require you to come to campus. There are two types of online classes. Asynchronous courses, which do not require you to participate at a specific date and time, and synchronous courses, which will require you to “attend” a class virtually during the times listed on the schedule.

To confirm participation requirements, check the online course schedule at nsc.edu. If there are times and dates listed, this is when you’ll need to participate, either in-person or online. For hybrid courses, make sure you carefully review the syllabus and the course’s Canvas page.

Hybrid

Hybrid classes will require some in-person attendance but will not meet as often as traditional in-person courses. You’ll complete the remainder of the required class work online. The requirements for hybrid courses vary, but by reducing the amount of in-person coursework, NSC can reduce class sizes and maintain social distancing protocols.
