

MEGAN LYNE (continued)

What are your interests when not working?

- I love to go on really long walks with my friends where we get to catch up on everything going on in our lives.
- I also loved riding Lime Scooters around campus.

What will be the most difficult thing to learn once you start working?

- I will have to adjust to realizing that I am now the professional and no longer the student.
- Nurses do a great job of fostering the new grads on the floor, but it will still be a big adjustment.

How do you see yourself contributing to society?

- Something that I feel very passionate about is ensuring that each patient that enters the hospital receives the same amount of quality care no matter their race, sex, economic status, etc.
- Nurses have a huge voice in advocating for patients, and I hope to use mine in a positive way to help those that are not treated with the respect they deserve.

What motivates you?

- The smiles I receive from my patients continue to motivate me during every shift I work.
- My friends also are huge motivators for me continuing to be myself.

I will consider myself a success in life if....

- I continue to be surrounded with loving friends and family by my side, and if I remain happy in everything I do in life.
