

NCHRA (Tri-Valley)
Presentation on “Creating and Building Effective
Partnerships with HR”

Please join me on September 14th in Pleasanton, California where I will be presenting at the Tri-Valley NCHRA series presentation on “Creating and Building Effective Partnerships with HR”.

During our session we will review avenues for enhancing your professional development in establishing and managing partnerships with your peers, counterparts and executives. With the initiation of strong partnerships comes the development of mutual respect, trust and inclusion. Lastly, we will see how these key roles are interwoven into both day to day activities in forming and maintaining strategic alliances for more positive bottom line results.

We will explore a number of current real-world topics including, “What is HR’s definition today?”, “Who has Real Responsibility and Ownership for HR Functions,” “Developing a Sphere of Influence,” “HR’s Role in Being the Driver of Change,” and more.

For more information on the session please go to <https://www.nchra.org/events/EventDetails.aspx?id=1074839> . I look forward to seeing and talking with you on September 14th.
