

Gear's Construction

Kendrick Gear is the proud owner of Gear's Construction, located in Greenville, Mississippi. Established in 2009, the firm performs commercial and institutional building construction and building alteration and renovation services. Gear's Construction services clients throughout Mississippi, Tennessee, Arkansas, and Louisiana.

Gear gained independence at an early age and was positively influenced by his grandfather, John Liddell, and Lavern Harper, a local businessman. "My grandfather and Mr. Harper were great role models and provided invaluable business advice. I learned a lot from them, which helped thrust me into the world of entrepreneurship," said Gear.

Gear's Construction bids mostly as a prime contractor while providing subcontracting opportunities to firms such as McCain Plumbing, Bell Construction, Forest Construction, and AEC Construction. The firm has also completed projects for the Greenville Depot, Durant Depot, and Calhoun City Library which included installing lights, flooring, plumbing, paint, and new ceilings. Gear's Construction is currently providing renovations to Hardy Middle School, Lanier High School, and Jim Hill High School.

Gear explained that being a business owner has allowed him to give people the opportunities they never had. "Being an entrepreneur comes with a sense of moral compass. I am grateful to be able to give youth a second chance to break generational cycles by providing them with knowledge and jobs," he said.

Gear leaves a word of advice to fellow DBEs and small business owners alike. He expressed the importance of building bonding capacity, partnering with other contractors, and treating others fairly.

OSHA Safety Tip of the Month!

Anyone working in a cold environment may be at risk of cold stress. Some workers may be required to work outdoors in cold environments and for extended periods, for example, snow cleanup crews, sanitation workers, police officers and emergency response and recovery personnel, like firefighters, and emergency medical technicians. Cold stress can be encountered in these types of work environments. The following frequently asked questions will help workers understand what cold stress is, how it may affect their health and safety, and how it can be prevented.

What are the risk factors that contribute to cold stress?

- Wetness/dampness, dressing improperly, and exhaustion.
- Predisposing health conditions such as hypertension, hypothyroidism, and diabetes
- Poor physical conditioning

What are the symptoms of hypothermia?

Mild symptoms:

An exposed worker is alert.

He or she may begin to shiver and stomp their feet to generate heat.

Moderate to Severe symptoms:

As the body temperature continues to fall, symptoms will worsen, and shivering will stop.

The worker may lose coordination and fumble with items in the hand, become confused and disoriented.

He or she may be unable to walk or stand, pupils become dilated, pulse and breathing become slowed, and loss of consciousness can occur. A person could die if help is not received immediately.

What can be done for a person suffering from hypothermia?

Call 911 immediately in an emergency; otherwise seek medical assistance as soon as possible.

Move the person to a warm room or vehicle.

Remove wet clothes and replace them with dry clothes, cover the body (including the head and neck) with layers of blankets; and with a vapor barrier (e.g. tarp, garbage bag). Do not cover the face. For more information visit www.OSHA.gov.
