COACHES NEEDED!

The Ride to Work ministry has been providing rides to workers without cars or access to public transportation for several years now, and they have changed lives by helping people get to and from work for up to three months while they save money to repair a vehicle, buy a vehicle, make arrangements with co-workers to share rides, or move to housing that is near public transportation or within walking or biking distance to a job. They have a waiting list of people they would like to help, but they need more coaches!

A Ride to Work coach is matched with a client and after an initial meeting, the coach helps the client schedule their rides (with Uber and taxi services) and then follows up on a regular basis to ensure that the client is following the rules and making progress towards their success plan-- their plan for providing their own transportation. After the initial meeting, the contact with the client usually takes no more than 1-2 hours per week, much of which is done by phone or text. Face to face meetings occur as needed. Coaches also attend monthly operational meetings with the rest of the Ride to Work team. These meetings are held at the Golden Corner Food Pantry in Seneca.

If you would like to know more, check out the Ride to Work website at rtwministry.org or contact Ron Kaufman at rkaufman@rtwministry.org.
