

Partners in Prevention

Volume 18, Issue 11, November 2016

SC Insurance Director to Address Charleston Workshop

Although South Carolina leadership is still engaged in Hurricane Matthew recovery, they understand that disaster resilience requires a multi-hazard approach. With this in mind, FEMA, FLASH, South Carolina Department of Insurance, South Carolina Emergency Management Division, and their partners are going forward with the planned QuakeSmart workshop today in Charleston.

The workshop is designed for building officials, businesses, corporations, engineers, emergency managers, homebuilders, leaders, manufacturers, nonprofits, organizations, policymakers, public officials, risk managers, and small businesses. The daylong agenda will feature a keynote presentation from South Carolina Insurance Department Director Ray Farmer on disaster resilient public policy and the role of strong, well-enforced building codes.

Attendees will receive streamlined business continuity planning and mitigation project plans with simple, step-by-step instructions to help reduce risk and protect employees, clients, customers, and communities.

Contact Barbara Harrison at barbara@flash.org for more information.