

Teaching the Truth about Critical Race Theory (CRT)

... and How it's Affecting our Teachers & Students

Sunday, October 10th, 7pm on ZOOM

Outrageous things are being said about Critical Race Theory, and it is being misrepresented and misused in our communities. Attempts are being made to censor school libraries and even to control what teachers can learn in their professional development. Forces are trying to have us believe that there isn't a problem with racial inequities that needs to be addressed. Laws are being proposed at the state level that would ban the teaching of any history that acknowledges systemic oppression of people of color or women in the past or present.

Join us for a Zoom event where we will learn about what CRT actually is, what's going on in our local schools, and how it's affecting teachers and students. We'll hear from:

- Julie McGovern, EdD – English Language Arts teacher - What is CRT?
- Juliet Steizer, former Oconomowoc School Board Member - How School Board polarization is affecting school boards, teachers, students and parents
- John Norcross - Parent and activist - What does the radical right's obsession with masks, vaccines and CRT do in our local communities?
- Katie Hermann - Teacher at Arrowhead High School - Standing up for students - working to oppose AB/SB Bill 411

Sunday, October 10th, 7pm on Zoom. To register, look for the link on the LCUUC website homepage (lcuuc.org) under Critical Race Theory
