If contesting points of view, as we find today in our families, our church, our political systems, and our world don't seem able to listen to each other without shouting at or recriminating each other, how can we possibly hope for reconciliation? Yet our biblical tradition offers us several examples of how those who preceded us on faith did that very thing. They tell us that we too can indeed bring reconciliation to a world that is fractured.

Dianne Bergant, CSA is Carroll Stuhlmueller, CP Distinguished Professor Emerita of Biblical Studies at Catholic Theological Union in Chicago. She was President of the Catholic Biblical Association of America (2000-1) and has been an active member of the Chicago Catholic/Jewish Scholars Dialogue for the past thirty years. For more than twenty-five years she has been the Old Testament book reviewer of The Bible Today, having been a member of the editorial board for twenty-five years. Five of these years she served as the magazine's general editor. She wrote the weekly column The Word for America magazine (2002-5), reflections that have now been published by Paulist Press. She is currently working in the areas of biblical interpretation and biblical theology, particularly issues of peace, ecology and feminism.
