¹ What is unclaimed property? Unclaimed property is intangible property that is not in the possession of its owner. Examples of unclaimed property include dormant bank accounts, uncashed checks (including paychecks), unclaimed insurance proceeds, forgotten utility deposits, uncashed dividend checks and unexchanged shares of stock. Generally, if the property in question has not had any activity within a certain period of time, and the holder is unable to locate the property owner, it is considered abandoned and must be reported to the respective state’s unclaimed property program. These outstanding liabilities cannot simply be written off and posted to revenue, there are specific regulations that must be followed.
