

Call for Featured Articles

The mission of Supporting Emotional Needs of the Gifted (SENG) is to empower families and communities to guide gifted and talented individuals to reach their goals: intellectually, physically, emotionally, socially, and spiritually.

We are currently seeking original articles for inclusion in our SENG Library. We welcome submissions that connect to our mission statement and include current research and perspectives related to the needs of gifted children and adults.

Article types: Research papers, review articles, case studies, editorials, personal reflections

Target audiences: Gifted children and adults, families, caregivers, educators, clinicians, mental health practitioners, counselors, community groups

Possible topics: Issues affecting gifted adults or teens, navigating education systems, advocacy, relationships/dating, gifted college experience, twice exceptionality, parenting, creativity, international perspectives on giftedness, early childhood, growth mindset/productive struggle, etc...

Submission guidelines: Articles should be around 1,000 words and written in web style. Additional guidelines can be found here.

Deadline: Featured articles may be proposed and submitted at any time. The timeline for publication and inclusion in the SENGvine newsletter is determined by the SENG Board.

Proposal submission: Complete this form to submit an article proposal. After submission, a SENG Board Member will contact you with next steps.
