

Section Chief of Hospitalist Medicine | Wake Forest School of Medicine

Winston Salem, North Carolina

Are you an innovative and dynamic leader? If so, please take a few minutes to review this Section Chief of Hospitalist Medicine position at a leading academic medical center located in North Carolina. The ideal candidate will have the proven administrative skills to lead 30+ faculty physicians and 10 advanced practice providers while evolving the program to its next level of excellence in academic hospital medicine. The new Section Chief will play important roles in shaping the academic mission of the Section while nurturing the development of junior faculty, and in promoting a high-value, patient-centered clinical environment. Additionally, you will:

- Redefine and improve the standard of inpatient care
- Provide the highest quality inpatient care in the most efficient and cost effective way
- Become an academic leader in hospital medicine, bringing new knowledge and insight into clinical research, quality, and systems improvement, patient safety, and evidence-based medicine
- Develop best practices models for integrating acute care into the state's largest ACO

As Section Chief you can expect to spend approximately 50% of your time on administrative responsibilities and program development responsibilities and 50% of your time on clinical, research, and/or teaching activities. The specific levels in these areas will depend on your interests and areas of expertise. Additionally, you will oversee the Hospitalist programs at three community hospitals as well.
