Please join the Institute for Women's Health and Leadership in honoring the 2019 Marion Spencer Fay Award recipient, Carrie L. Byington, MD.

Dr. Byington currently serves as vice chancellor for health services at the Texas A&M University System. She is being honored for her leadership in the study of pediatric infectious disease, and her expertise and contributions in patient care, disease prevention, and education. Dr. Byington has also demonstrated an impressive commitment throughout her career to mentoring and advancing women and underrepresented populations in the health care field, as well as a humanitarian approach to immigrants and rural communities.

Her lecture "Leadership Lessons: Learning from Crossing Borders" will begin at 4 p.m. and will explore her leadership journey and the implications of crossing borders for academic health care missions including clinical care, education, mentorship and translational science.

The national Marion Spencer Fay Award, now in its 56th year, is presented annually by the Institute for Women's Health and Leadership to an outstanding woman physician and/or scientist who has made an exceptionally significant contribution to health care as a practitioner, medical educator, administrator and/or research scientist and who exhibits significant future potential. The award includes a $10,000 honorarium to support the recipient's work.
