

Division Chief of Pediatric Allergy, Immunology, and Rheumatology
UH Rainbow Babies & Children's Hospital
Cleveland, OH

UH Rainbow Babies & Children's Hospital is seeking a Division Chief to lead the newly combined Division of Pediatric Allergy, Immunology, and Rheumatology. The department is growing rapidly under the leadership of Marlene R. Miller, MD, MSc, Pediatrician-in-Chief of University Hospitals and Chair of the Department of Pediatrics. This inaugural leadership role provides you a unique opportunity to implement your own vision and build out a newly combined division.

Additional benefits of joining our team:

- We will provide the necessary resources needed to execute your vision, including support for the recruitment of multiple new faculty and support staff members.
- You will be joining one of the top pediatric departments for NIH funding in the United States. Considerable research collaboration opportunities already exist.
- Support and infrastructure for research are available through University Hospitals and the Case Western Reserve University School of Medicine.
- Best of all, you will have the complete support of a visionary leader who pours into her faculty and is excited to partner with you.

Ideal candidate profile:

- Qualified candidates must be board certified in Pediatrics and either Allergy/Immunology or Pediatric Rheumatology.
- We are seeking a leader with a passion for programmatic development along with a track record of scholarship and mentorship.
- The ideal candidate will embody the tripartite mission and has experience in clinical or translational research as well as various funding streams.
- Applicants of all ranks and tenures who meet the criteria above are encouraged to apply.
