

The Ohio State University Wexner Medical Center

Director, Division of Movement Disorders

The Ohio State University College of Medicine's Department of Neurology is seeking an exceptional academic physician-scholar with proven leadership skills to lead the Division of Movement Disorders, an academic unit within The Department of Neurology. This is a full-time position, with rank and salary commensurate with education and experience. The successful candidate will have access to substantive resources to build a research program in Parkinson's disease and related diseases. She or he should be a nationally/internationally respected physician-investigator who has made a substantial impact on the field of Movement Disorders. Demonstrated experience as a clinician and mentor is required.

The responsibilities of this committed leader include:

- Oversight and development of the administrative, clinical, and research operations of the Division of Movement Disorders;
- Stewardship of research, clinical, education, and development funds that are allocated to the Division of Movement Disorders;
- Establishment, in consultation with faculty members within the Division of Movement Disorders, of divisional priorities, standards, and practices;
- Implementation of policies and initiatives to enhance patient care and financially responsible interventions;
- Expansion of the Movement Disorders clinical operation by enhancing patient volumes, safety, and quality care;
- Expansion of the deep brain stimulation program;
- Introduction and development of novel multidisciplinary and customized clinics in Movement Disorders;
- Augmentation of clinical trial and translational research activities, with an emphasis on novel disease modifying therapies, and investigator initiated studies;
- Application for grant funding to federal and non-profit organizations, and supervision of research, within the area of Parkinson's Disease and other Movement Disorders;
- Recruitment of outstanding Movement Disorders clinicians and researchers to OSU;
- Mentorship of faculty throughout the division;
- Advancement of opportunities for faculty development;
- Promotion of the diverse gender, ethnic, racial, and socioeconomic faculty environment that exists within the division;
- Instruction of medical students, residents, and fellows about the pathogenesis, diagnosis and treatment of movement disorders;
- Participation in national research activities to promote the visibility and reputation of the Division of Movement Disorders, Department of Neurology, and the OSU School of Medicine;
- Working closely with institutional development to foster the philanthropic endeavors of the Department of Neurology, and the Division of Movement Disorders.

Qualifications for Director, Division of Movement Disorders:

- Nationally or internationally renowned neurologist with a minimum of ten years of strong faculty academic experience and a track record of extramural funding and mentorship leading to trainees obtaining extramural funding as well.
- Completion of a fellowship training in movement disorders.
- Board Certified in neurology.
- Strong track record of clinical operations leadership.
- Demonstrated leadership skills in building innovative programs as well as recruiting and retaining faculty.
- Prior demonstrated commitment to the recruitment, development, and retention of women, underserved minorities, and those with disability status.
- Eligibility for Ohio medical licensure required.
- Respected experience in research, clinical practice, and education.
- Qualify for academic appointment at the associate professor or full professor rank; and,
- An active research program is desired but not required in basic, translational, clinical or health services research.

For consideration, please send CV along with a cover letter to

Trevor Bethel, FASPR | Manager, Physician and Faculty Recruitment
The Ohio State University Wexner Medical Center
Trevor.Bethel@osumc.edu

The Ohio State University is an equal opportunity employer. All qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, national origin, disability status, or protected veteran status.