Associate Dean, Undergraduate Education, School of Nursing
Open Faculty Rank Position
Vacancy Announcement

Position Summary

The School of Nursing produces nurse leaders who are transforming health care through science, education, practice, and policy worldwide. The school has more than 750 students enrolled in its bachelor’s, master’s and doctoral programs. Graduates go on to become national and international leaders in patient care, public health, government, and education.

In fiscal year 2016, the school received $15.1 million in research funding and was ranked No. 1 in National Institutes of Health funding among nursing schools. U.S. News & World Report ranked the school’s graduate programs 4th overall, its nurse midwifery graduate program 15th, and its family nurse practitioner program 8th.

The school has 130 internationally renowned faculty, including 33 American Academy of Nursing Fellows, 2 National Academy of Medicine Fellows. Students can learn from adjunct faculty at more than 500 clinical sites around the world. The School’s most notable clinical partners include Emory Healthcare, Grady Memorial Hospital, Atlanta VA Medical Center, and Children’s Healthcare of Atlanta. The school is a National League of Nursing Center of Excellence in Nursing Education, and three of its faculty are NLN Academy of Nursing Education Fellows and six are Certified Nurse Educators. In FY17, Emory nursing graduates had a 97% NCLEX pass rate. The school has 7,092 alumni.

Working directly for the Associate Dean for Academic Advancement and in close collaboration with the Dean of the Nell Hodgson Woodruff School of Nursing, the Associate Dean for Undergraduate Education (ADUE) serves as the principal academic officer responsible for ensuring programmatic excellence. As the School’s leader responsible for undergraduate education, the Associate Dean develops course offerings and schedules, ensures that standards and policies of the School and accrediting agencies are met and facilitates the strategic planning process of the undergraduate education program for the school. S/he will also strengthen and maintains undergraduate education relations between and among the School of Nursing and others institutions. This position serves as a member of the School of Nursing Dean’s Leadership Council as well as other committees and is the School of Nursing’s key representative to enhance and maintain excellence in the undergraduate nursing program. In addition, the Associate Dean leads strategic health care workforce partnerships with Emory Healthcare nurse executives.

Qualifications

Qualified candidates will hold a terminal degree, PhD or equivalent, or DNP. Preferred minimum of 7 years’ experience in an academic nursing environment with a demonstrated record of leadership including strategic planning, curriculum development, and/or teaching pedagogy, including documented results. The successful candidate will have had progressive leadership experience in nursing academic environments and a well-established program of nursing scholarship. He/she will exhibit a substantive understanding of the important issues in nursing education, as well as a deep understanding of academic health centers.

For Consideration

Interested candidates may submit a curriculum vitae and letter of interest directly to:

Dr. Gregory H. Jones
Associate Vice President for Health Affairs
The Robert W. Woodruff Health Sciences Center
Emory University
dr.gregoryjones@emory.edu

Requisition 78045BR on the following website: http://www.emory.jobs

Emory University is an EOAA employer. Women and members of minority groups are strongly encouraged to apply.

Emory offers a highly competitive salary and fringe benefits package.