Chief, Division of Cardiovascular Medicine

The Keck School of Medicine of the University of Southern California (USC) invites applications and nominations for the position of Chief, Division of Cardiovascular Medicine.

The Keck Medical Center is ranked #11 in Cardiology and Heart Surgery in the latest USN&WR, providing a great environment for elevation of the Division of Cardiovascular Medicine. The Division is poised for growth with clinical activities at the Keck Medical Center, USC+LAC Hospital, and a number of regional sites in the LA area. A new hospital tower is currently in the planning stage and there are bold plans in the LA market that could provide important new space in the near term for the Division.

The Chief of Cardiovascular Medicine will be an outstanding leader and skilled physician, widely recognized in the field with a strong track record of program building and innovation. The Chief will be responsible for clinical, academic, and administrative activities of the Division and therefore she/he must have a deep knowledge of clinical practice; a strong commitment to training and career development in research and clinical care; and demonstrated leadership and administrative ability in complex clinical enterprise.

The Chief must bring vision to the task of drafting the Division's future, coupled with an ability to communicate in a fashion that inspires others to follow. She/he must be a consensus builder, while also capable of serving as an agent for change. The Chief will evaluate the current strengths of the Division, and identify areas for productive growth in clinical, educational, and research programs. From that assessment, she/he will establish a strategic overarching long-term plan for the Division.
