

Chair, Department of Kinesiology and Nutrition Sciences
School of Integrated Health Sciences
University of Nevada, Las Vegas

The University of Nevada, Las Vegas (UNLV) School of Integrated Health Sciences announces a national search for the next Chair, Department of Kinesiology and Nutrition Sciences.

The UNLV seeks a distinguished academic leader with proven strategic, research, judicious, community centered, and collaborative leadership skills to serve as the next Chair, Department of Kinesiology and Nutrition Sciences. The Chair will continue to innovate kinesiology and nutritional science education in a geographic location with an immense need of healthcare professionals.

The School of Integrated Health Sciences continues to make a positive impact and fosters evolutionary changes in health care on local and national levels. The demand for exceptional care and for caring, knowledgeable professions is at an all-time high. The school meets that demand by graduating students who are expertly trained and prepared to not only continue the delivery of top-notch health care but also advance innovation, research, and enhanced delivery methods throughout the industry.

The ideal candidates will demonstrate academic judgment and an uncompromising commitment to academic excellence, an interest in the development of a culture of research and securing external funding as well as training graduate students in research scholarship, a dedication to enhancing diversity, a deep commitment to interdisciplinary and inter-professional collaboration, and a desire to integrate the department into the community at large. The Chair will have extensive experience developing and implementing a program of research and attaining grant funding. He/she will work in collaboration with leadership to establish a research culture that will drive the University's pursuit of top-tier status as a research institute.
