

Indiana Regional Medical Center (IRMC) has retained WittKieffer to assist in the recruitment of their next Chief Medical Officer (CMO). IRMC is seeking an outstanding physician leader with significant management and clinical leadership experience to serve as the senior chief physician executive for the medical center.

Located in Indiana, Pennsylvania, IRMC is an integrated, not-for-profit regional health system anchored by the 166-bed IRMC and an integrated multi-specialty medical group, with numerous outpatient sites and the IHC Foundation. IRMC has revenues exceeding $207 million annually and now consists of more than 1,000 employees that serve Indiana and its surrounding counties in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. IRMC continues to focus on its autonomy, and remains committed to being an independent hospital, while it enters into various endeavors with larger health systems.

Reporting into IRMC's CEO, the CMO will serve as a member of the IRMC executive team, and focus on continuing to differentiate IRMC as a market leader in the delivery of patient centered and high value care. The CMO will be accountable for serving as the senior executive for the clinical performance of IRMC including new clinical initiatives, establishing best practices, clinical standardization and optimization and continued integration of the health system.

The CMO is a visible leader, who builds and cultivates relationships inside and outside the organization, resulting in confidence, integrity, and credibility in interactions and decisions. The CMO is also an inclusive leader and team player who inspires physicians, nurses and staff at all levels. The successful candidate will be experienced operationally and regarded as a talented leader, communicator and creative problem solver. The CMO will possess exceptional relationship and team building skills, and bring an innovative systems approach to problem solving, consensus building and advancing contemporary process improvement initiatives.
