Weekly Torah Reading – Parashat Bamidbar

Pshat – The Story at a Glance

1. The fourth book of the Torah begins with God instructing Moses to take a census of the Israelite men in the desert. The total count from each of the tribes comes out to 603,550.
2. In the Israelite camp, the 12 Israelite tribes which each number in the tens of thousands, are arranged on the four sides around the Tabernacle.
3. A redemption ritual was instituted to mark a change in status; today this redemption ceremony continues as “Pidyon HaBen” for baby boys.
4. The Levites are counted and assigned specific tasks, such as standing guard around the Tabernacle of the Pact.
5. The sons of Kahat are specifically named from among the Levites as the ones who will transport the most sacred objects in the Tent.

Drash – A Closer Look at this Week's Parsha

God spoke to Moses in the wilderness of Sinai in the Tent of Meeting on the first day of the second month of the second year after their departure from Egypt saying, “Take a census of all the congregation of the Children of Israel, by their families, by their fathers' houses, according to the number of the names, every male, head by head.” (Numbers 1:1-2).

This is not the only census in the Torah, but it does not take long to figure out why the English name of the fourth book of the Torah is “Numbers.” Rashi reads these verses and points out that God counts the Israelites at different points throughout their journey through the wilderness. God counted when they left Egypt, when many died in the aftermath of the Golden Calf and when God's presence was about to fill the Tabernacle.

But as Rashi explains, this repeated counting is not merely logistical. God counting multiple times serves as evidence of God's care for the Israelites and for their wellbeing.
