

Five Justices for a Stronger Court

Vote all five. If you give to one, start at the top.

All five races are nonpartisan. On your ballot, look for Supreme Court Positions 1, 3, 4, 5, and 7. Your support goes furthest when it starts at the top of this list.

5 of 9

SUPREME COURT SEATS ON ONE BALLOT

Election Day is Tuesday, November 3, 2026.

A majority of the court is on the ballot, and the next court is likely to decide the state income tax challenge and the HB 1217 rent control lawsuit WBPA joined. Do not skip these races.

Ballots mailed Oct. 16 | Register in person through Election Day | Drop box by 8 p.m. Nov. 3 or postmarked by Nov. 3 | VoteWA.gov

Sean O'Donnell

ON YOUR BALLOT: SUPREME COURT, POSITION 4

Open seat, two-candidate race, no incumbent to beat. The strongest opportunity on the ballot.

A King County Superior Court judge for 13 years and former Green River Task Force prosecutor. Elected president of the Washington Superior Court Judges' Association and named Outstanding Lawyer of the Year by the King County Bar Association.

Dave Larson

ON YOUR BALLOT: SUPREME COURT, POSITION 5

Came within 0.61% of winning in 2024 with over 1.6 million votes, highly competitive again.

A retired Federal Way Municipal Court judge with 18 years on the bench. Runs on judicial independence and applying the law as written.

David Stevens

ON YOUR BALLOT: SUPREME COURT, POSITION 3

Led his race in the August primary, very viable.

A Mason County Superior Court judge, elected in 2024. Calls for a principled, consistent court and reform in how justices are chosen.

Scott Edwards

ON YOUR BALLOT: SUPREME COURT, POSITION 1

A serious challenge for a seat held by a recent appointee.

A Seattle attorney at Ballard Spahr, running to bring balance and independence to the court. Advocates reform of the judicial appointment process.

Todd Bloom

ON YOUR BALLOT: SUPREME COURT, POSITION 7

The steepest climb, against an incumbent first appointed in 2008, but a race worth supporting.

A Navy veteran and tax attorney. Running to restore restraint and consistency to the bench.

Share this guide with everyone you know in Washington, and turn your ballot over to vote all five.