Cal Poly Pomona Climate Action Community Presents

VIRTUAL PANEL EVENT with CLIMATE ACTION LEADERS

Claire Latané

Educator, Author, Ecological Designer and CPP Climate Action Community Faculty Advisor

Assistant Professor of Landscape Architecture at CPP, published author and landscape designer, Professor Latané brings to the panel her experience of designing and writing about sustainable landscapes that promote mental health and resilience.

Arthur Levine

Urban Agriculture Expert, Project Director and Board Member at Huerta del Valle

Arthur Levine brings to the panel over a decade of experience in community and urban agriculture in Southern California. His work transects environmental justice, food systems, and the climate. Huerta del Valle works in the Inland Empire to connect residents with their food through urban farming and education.

Nicole Lambrou

Educator, Architect, and Instructor of Planning for Climate Change at CPP

Nicole Lambrou brings to the panel her fifteen years of architectural and urban design experience in the US and Europe and an expertise in the intersection of politics, design, and the climate. As an URP lecturer in the Urban and Regional Planning Department, Her current research as a PhD Candidate in Urban Planning at UCLA explores how the politics of climate resilience shape urban environmental transformations.

Felicia Williams

Public and Environmental Policy Expert, City Council Member and Environmental Advocate

Pasadena City Council Member Felicia Williams brings to the panel an extensive background and experience in finance, public policy and urban planning. As a local leader she regularly navigates environmental policy and legislation while advocating for social and environmental justice.

Dr. Kyle Brown

Educator, Climate Research and Community Organizing Expert

Dr. Kyle Brown brings to the panel his experience as an educator, planner, community organizer and environmental activist with Clean & Green Pomona, a local environmental action group. He is currently a professor of Landscape Architecture at CPP, former director of the Lyle Center, and co-author of the CPP Climate Action Plan (2009).
