Workshop Description

Presented in cooperation with the University of Northern BC, this interactive session will help participants to implement or improve a road safety program that fits their organization. Participants learn about the human and financial costs of motor vehicle incidents, and apply hazard identification/risk assessment procedures to prioritize road safety issues. They will use Road Safety At Work tools and resources to develop action plans aimed at preventing workplace vehicle crashes.

Who Should Attend

The workshop is for owners, managers, supervisors, health and safety practitioners, Joint Occupational Health and Safety committee members and others who have responsibility for making decisions and developing programs to keep employees safe on BC roads.

You are encouraged to send one or two representatives from your organization. To help you develop and improve your road safety program, we will provide each organization with three hours of follow-up consultation with one of our road safety specialists.
