If a resident or staff member has a temperature of 100 ^{0}F or higher OR one or more of the symptoms above:

- Isolate the resident to their room. Send home the staff member. The ill person should wear a facemask if tolerated.
- Contact the appropriate agency or healthcare provider to determine the need for medical assessment and to make arrangements for testing.
- Wear a mask, eye protection, and disposable gloves when working with the resident, and a gown while bathing, dressing, or toileting and other activities where splashing might occur. Remove the gown before exiting the room.
- Increase hand hygiene and cleaning and disinfection of surfaces. Dedicate equipment and items to each resident. Clean and disinfect items between uses if this is not possible.
