

Aloe Care Health has formally announced its commercial launch, making it the most comprehensive digital assistant for elder care in the market today. The safety and communication service is now available through numerous major private duty home care strategic partners, personal emergency response distributors in the U.S., and to consumers directly.

Aloe Care Health features include:

- Smart Sensors that identify in-home falls and out-of-the-ordinary movement - no wearable tracker needed. Air quality and temperature fluctuations are also flagged.
- A Smart Communications Hub, allowing elders to simply ask for help. If needed, the secure voice assistant then alerts professional emergency services. Caregivers (family and professionals) are kept up-to-date.
- A 24/7/365 Emergency Response team to ensure that elders have access to the level of medical care they need.
- The Aloe Care Family App, keeping the caregiving team connected to each other, and providing a direct line into the elders' Smart Hub for live, two-way conversations.

Select customers began receiving their first shipments of Aloe Care devices this quarter.

Steve Chandler, Owner of Elect Home Care, said: "Aloe Care's home set-up represents a major step forward in keeping older adults safer and improving communication between everyone in the care circle. These are two of the biggest challenges families face. What's more, our professionals really value the ability to collaborate with others in the Aloe Care family app; it helps us do our jobs more efficiently and effectively."

Michael Abend, Director/Owner of concierge home care provider Extended Family of Wayland, added: "Aloe Care is such an innovative development for in-home safety and communication. So many independent-minded seniors struggle to accept support because they do not want to be seen with a caregiver or wearing a sometimes cumbersome medical alert pendant. Aloe Care's technology makes it easier for elders to accept support to stay as independent as possible and age safely on their terms."
