and professionals

October 15, 2020 12 - 1:30 p.m.

“Children and Trauma: Treatment in the context of the pandemic and social injustice”

Presenter: Ilana Amrani-Cohen, LICSW, PhD., Trainer and Consultant in Private Practice

Presentation Overview:

This presentation will highlight the impact of childhood trauma on brain function and overall social, emotional and physical well-being. We will review the developmental tasks of different age groups and how they are altered when traumatized. The webinar will address the impact of social injustices on childhood trauma and provide some strategies to help children cope more effectively with the emotional impact of the pandemic. Clinical examples will be included to highlight different points.

Objectives:

- Understand how traumatic stress effects the brain.
 - Recognize the effects of trauma on children’s development from birth to adolescence and identify helpful evidence- based treatment modalities.
 - Become more aware and responsive to how racial injustices contribute to the incidence of childhood trauma.
 - Identify coping strategies to help children during the pandemic
