STUMBLING STONES: THE JOHN ROSENBERG STORY

EVENT OVERVIEW

Imagine a child forced to flee Nazi Germany.

Imagine that same child growing up to help defend voting rights in Mississippi during the Civil Rights Movement.

Imagine then choosing to move into the Appalachian coalfields, fighting alongside families struggling to protect their homes, land, and dignity.

That child was John Rosenberg.

Stumbling Stones is John's extraordinary true story of a refugee who became a civil rights attorney, legal aid pioneer, community advocate, and champion for justice.

Through a powerful one-man theatrical performance by acclaimed actor Jeff Sherr, audiences journey through the defining moments of John's life – from the rise of antisemitism in Europe, to the Civil Rights era in the US, to the struggle for economic justice in Appalachia.

Jean Rosenberg, John's wife, is at the center of the story. Her commitment to families, education, healthcare, and community building demonstrates that justice happens not only in courtrooms but also in neighborhoods, schools, and homes.

Following the performance, the audience will have the rare opportunity to hear directly from John and Jean Rosenberg, who are planning to attend the event and participate in a live discussion and audience Q&A.

This evening offers more than entertainment.

It offers a call to action.

At a time when communities wrestle with questions of democracy, equality, belonging, and civic responsibility, Stumbling Stones reminds us that one person can make a profound difference and that access to justice remains essential to building strong, thriving communities. Through John and Jean Rosenberg's example, we are reminded that every generation has the opportunity to carry the work forward.
