

THE RESILIENCE THAT IS US

A handmade ceramic tile legacy wall that memorializes and honors the resilience, strength and spirit of our Native women and children affected by violence.

Coalition to Stop Violence Against Native Women

Let us honor the collective strengths, resilience, and spirit of our Native women and children.

Let this legacy wall be a permanent reminder of our mission to all who visit our offices

Celebrating and honoring 20 years of service to New Mexico's tribal communities, the Coalition to Stop Violence Against Native Women will be installing a legacy wall in their new offices to commemorate and honor the resilience, strength and spirit of our Native women and children who are affected by violence.

CSVANW is inviting families, communities, agencies and organizations to individualize a tile in honor of a Native woman or child affected by violence for the "Resilience That is Us" legacy wall and become a permanent part of CSVANW's new home and it's legacy.

Only 150 tiles total will be a part of CSVANW's legacy wall.

Legacy Wall Installation Steps

1. Individuals create & design their original art onto 8.5 x 8.5 paper provided
2. Art is submitted to CSVANW, transferred to ceramic tile, and glazed with a satin finish
3. Tile professionally mounted and installed at CSVANW's new home
4. Open house scheduled to reveal legacy wall to community
