

Why My Specialized Social Media Liability Course and Multi-Policy Shield System Are Essential

Recent U.S. Supreme Court, EEOC, FCC, and other agencies have redefined social media as a workplace social media hazard; this completely changes the negligence standards applied to your social media training and policies. Additionally, courts have blurred the lines between personal and work-related social media use by holding public employees and elected officials personally liable for violations related to public records, the First Amendment, and other laws.

Time to Address Social Media as a Workplace Safety Risk

When social media missteps occur, plaintiff attorneys often focus on non-compliant training and policies. To mitigate risk, government entities must shift from viewing social media as a mere communication tool to recognizing it as a significant human resource liability issue requiring expert-crafted policies and training.

This Type Of Specialized Training Cannot Be Done In-House

In-house attorneys and public and private administrators agree that the new social media speech laws carry hidden risks and complexities. Lacking specialized expertise, they are unable to properly update their social media policies and training to comply with the new federal standards.

Affordable Pricing for All Entities

To accommodate both small and large businesses, I offer a pricing structure that encourages in-house attorneys and decision-makers to make the online course mandatory for all employees and part of their onboarding process. Given the pivotal role social media now plays in civil rights, harassment, defamation, and other legal issues, this two-hour course is a critical resource for defending against claims of retaliation, inadequate training, and negligent policies.

Program #2: Multi-Shield Policy System

Purpose: These policies, grounded in state and federal law, draw on my 33 years of expertise in public sector digital media to significantly reduce risk for both employees and employers. For maximum protection, I recommend purchasing the complete policy set. If budget constraints exist, prioritize the Primary Employee Social Media Policy Update, Citizens Social Media Policy, and Personal Use of Social Media Accounts and Devices. While the primary policy covers personal use and content moderation, separate policies help counter claims of unawareness, reducing litigation risks.

Cost: $997 for one policy and $798 for each additional policy. If you would like to purchase all the policies, the cost is $4,900. You can purchase one or more policies.

Payment: We prefer you pay for the policy program by check. If you are purchasing both the online course and policy program, you can use one check for both services.

Registering For Policy Shield Program: Email me your choice of policies and I will send you a service agreement. Below are the current policies included in our Multi-Shield Policy System:

1. 2025 Updated Social Media Policy: A critical policy aligned with new federal social media laws.
