

Congratulations! Your article will soon be available online!

SAGE no longer imposes an embargo. You are now free to share your accepted manuscript. You can share this in any format. This may include posting a downloadable copy on any website, saving a copy in any repository or network, sharing a copy through social media and distributing print or electronic copies. Please note that this policy refers to your accepted manuscript, NOT the final published pdf. The Final Published PDF that has been copy-edited and typeset by SAGE is the version published on the journal website. This is more restricted in how it is shared, but below you will find instructions on how to share read-only access to your article through the journal website.

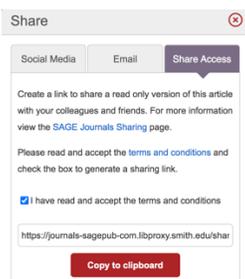

Full information: <https://us.sagepub.com/en-us/nam/journal-author-archiving-policies-and-re-use>

If you have NIH funding, your paper will be handled by SAGE and will be uploaded to PMC. If you have other eligible funding, please take time now to post your accepted manuscript to PMC (see <https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/about/public-access/>)

Further information on ways to share your article: To share a link to allow others to read your manuscript, you can use the SAGE site. You must be logged in to either your institution subscription or your SRBR society membership. Select “share” here:

And then select “Share access”

Further visibility can be gained by including @SRBR_Outreach in your tweets. This is currently managed by Bharath Ananthasubramaniam @bharath_ananth – read more here:

<https://srbr.org/introducing-srbrs-new-public-outreach-fellow/>

You can email Bharath at srbroureach@gmail.com

If you would like to send Bharath a graphic he can use in public posts, that will be very helpful for promoting your article. Be sure not to share any graphic that is protected by copyright.