

I Wanna be a DIRECTOR!!!

Many of us have had that thought at one time or another, but haven't had the opportunity to explore the idea any further... It's just a thought, an idea... well, think no more!

Rural Rogues Productions, in partnership with Highlands Little Theatre, is pleased to announce its first Director's workshop. Learn the basics of directing for the stage, from first reading to opening night (and beyond). This workshop will provide insight into all aspects of a production: auditions, casting, rehearsal schedules, blocking, character/relationship, costumes, sets, props, lighting, stage management, and everything else!

Each participant will direct a short scene featuring 3-5 characters. The scenes will be presented as works-in-progress to an invited audience at the end of the workshop.

Under the leadership of director and teacher, Michael Clipperton, this workshop will give you the skills needed to plan and direct your very first production!

Cost: $100.00 per person.

Location: Haliburton Highlands Museum, 66 Museum Road

Date: May 11-13, 2018 (Friday evening and daytime sessions on Saturday and Sunday)

For further information and to register contact Kate Butler at 705. 457.2760.

Space is limited, so don't delay!
