Financial sustainability for local governments depends on a broad array of people in the decision-making process. In this workshop, participants will discuss and learn strategies to help those with a stake in the ongoing financial health of their government encourage better, more sustainable decision-making. Local governments will have the opportunity to consider their own budget process and examine how the process could be improved to encourage sustainability.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND:
Local elected and appointed officials, staff, and administrators. This session is part of the County Commissioner Academy Series, and we also encourage elected/appointed officials from other local units of government as well!

DESCRIPTION:
- Learn about indicators of local government financial health
- Assess your own unit's decision-making strategies related to fiscal sustainability
- Learn best practices for sustainable and collaborative decision-making
- Tools to encourage a collaborative budget process
- Network with other elected officials
