

Stephen (Steve) Fulton
General Manager, Shipping and Logistics
TMK IPSCO

Steve Fulton is General Manager of Shipping and Logistics at TMK IPSCO, which is one of the world's largest producers of welded and seamless pipe as well as premium connections dedicated to servicing the oil and gas industry. In this role, Steve is responsible for strategic planning and procuring of all Logistics services in the Americas utilizing multiple modes of transportation and warehousing to meet customer's needs.

Prior to joining TMK IPSCO in 2008, Steve was employed by Ryerson Inc. for 21 years, Ryerson is one of the largest steel distribution companies in the Americas. Steve began his career in the planning and scheduling department for the Coil Processing Division. He also spent time as a Transportation Supervisor, Customer Service Representative, Regional Outside Sales Person, and Supervisor of Scheduling before moving to the Corporate Logistics Group as the Inbound Transportation Manager in 2003. Steve's last role at Ryerson was as the Assistant Director of Corporate Logistics.

Steve is or has been involved with NARS and its affiliates in the Midwest and Southwest. NARS creates a forum for shippers and rail companies to meet and converse on economic conditions as well as initiatives which can foster improved transit of goods and services. He recently served as the Chairperson for the Steel Manufacturers Association – Transportation Committee (fall 2015 through spring 2017). SMA represents a large portion of the Electric Arc Furnace (EAF) steelmaking capacity in North America and is active in Washington addressing regulatory concerns facing transportation as well as steel making.

Steve has been married for 30 years to Felicia and has a daughter (30 married with two kids) and a son (27). He is an active golfer and is a sports enthusiast. Steve attended Indiana Institute of Technology majoring in Electrical Engineering.