

ANNIE YANG

Economic Development Director, Harris County

Annie Yang has been active in the field of Economic Development for 20 years and currently serves as the Economic Development Director for Harris County. She works closely with the business community and her local, state, and federal counterparts, identifying vital development strategies that keep the County ready for the ever-changing business environment to facilitate economic growth, job creation and prosperity.

She collaborates with chambers of commerce frequently to receive international delegations and promote international trade so that the County can foster a more vibrant, thriving economy and stay competitive on the global stage.