THE CROWN OF THE CONTINENT

The Crown of the Continent spans the U.S. and Canada, where Alberta, British Columbia, and Montana meet. With Waterton-Glacier International Peace Park at its core, it is the only ecosystem in the U.S. that has continuously hosted all of its native species. This spectacular region is ecologically and culturally diverse, rich in tribal history, natural resources and beauty. The region faces stress from climate change and human development. By 2030 Glacier National Park is projected to lose all of its glaciers, fundamentally changing the hydrology of this continental headwaters.

9th Annual Roundtable on
the Crown of the Continent

September 24-26, 2019
Kwataqnuk Resort
Polson, Montana

ROUNDTABLE ANNUAL CONFERENCE

The Roundtable holds annual conferences to facilitate connection and communication in the region. The gatherings are organized around the most pressing challenges facing the landscape today: How do communities address climate change? How is youth leadership fostered in the landscape? How is the economy of the Crown changing, and what does that mean for communities? Each year people of all backgrounds come together to tackle these topics, sharing best practices, and making connections.
