ASSOCIATIONS

AMERICAN BEVERAGE ASSOCIATION

charmi@ameribev.org
http://www.ameribev.org
United States

The American Beverage Association (ABA) is the trade association that represents America's non-alcoholic beverage industry. ABA was founded in 1919 as the American Bottlers of Carbonated Beverages, and renamed the National Soft Drink Association in 1966. Today the ABA represents hundreds of beverage producers, distributors, franchise companies and support industries.

AUSTRALIAN BEVERAGES

https://www.australianbeverages.org
Australia

The Australian Beverages Council is headed by a Board of Directors, each of whose respective companies are involved in the franchise, manufacture, distribution or import of non-alcoholic, water, and juice-based beverages.

CANADIAN BEVERAGE ASSOCIATION

info@canadianbeverage.ca
https://www.canadianbeverage.ca
Canada

The Canadian sector employs directly and indirectly more than 60,000 Canadians from coast to coast, with over 18,000 jobs in manufacturing. Our jobs are made in Canada, and our products are made in Canada. We proudly represent the makers of more than 60 brands of non-alcoholic beverages in more than 200 facilities nation-wide.

CETIE

https://www.cetie.org

Since 1960, Cetie provides technical data sheets and guides streamlining both glass packaging and PET packaging. Major experts from the glass and PET packaging sectors related to bottling composed the Cetie network.

Scientific work at various universities such as Innsbruck (Austria), Boulder (USA), Southampton (Great Britain), Paris (France), Greifswald (Germany) and Trient (Italy) led to the development of devices to simulate the reaction of atoms and molecules in space (interstellar clouds). This research was the prerequisite for the Ion-Molecule-Reaction Mass Spectrometer (IMR-MS), which is the core technology used in most V&F analyzers. Today IMR is one of the most sensitive technologies for measuring impurities in gases.
